THE lady guests of the Gibson House gave a dance last evening in the parlors of the house. A number of well-known ladies and gentlemen from the city were present. An elegant midnight repast was furnished to the dancers by the proprietors.

JACK HENRY and James Farrell, the pickpockets arrested on suspicion of stealing Mr. T. D. Lincoln's gold watch on a street car, were compelled to sit for their pictures, which now ornament the "Rogue's Gallery" in Col. Snelbaker's office, after which they were released and are now gone from our gaze.

THE Sovereigns of Industry will hold a mass meeting to-morrow evening at Hibernia Hall. Mr. Peter H. Clark will address the meeting on the objects and nature of the Order. The Sovereigns of Industry, like the Grange, propose to go directly to the producer to purchase all articles that come under the working-man's wants.

W. H. HICKS thought he could turn an honest penny by selling a patent burglar alarm. He was furnished a sample by Morris Gudstone, and went on the street and commenced the boring process. He didn't sell any. Neither did he return the sample. His employer became alarmed, and Hicks is now reclining in the Ninth-street Station-house.

GEORGE SCHIMMELER, Esq., and Miss Louisa Sigale were married yesterday at the Cathedral with appropriate ceremonies. The wedding festivities took place at the house of the bride, and "mid dancing and good cheer, the wee sma' hours of the night were passed away." The hosts of friends of the newly-married couple send them their many congratulations.

WALTER SCOTT RIDGWAY didn't have a turkey dinner to-day. They don't feed prisoners very well at the Station-houses. Walter Scott took a room at the Hotel de Hammond last night, and to-morrow will listen to his explanation as to how he came to write the name of K. Korte to an order for groceries on John Mulvihill, Seventh and Sycamore.

A Clifton Scandal.

Mayor Bugher, of Clifton, who created such a sensation in August last by his assault upon the wife of one of our prominent business men, and by his imprisoning her, has been sued by Mrs. Ross and her husband for $50,000 damages. The best legal talent at this bar has been engaged by Mr. Ross. Three charges have been preferred by them against the Mayor of Clifton.

The first petition sets out that Bugher, assaulted the plaintiff, Mary A. Ross, and violently struck her with a horse whip, causing her suffering, and this to her damage in the sum of $10,000. As a second cause of action, the plaintiff avers that Bugher caused her to be seized by the Marshal and dragged to prison; wherefore, she asks judgment for $10,000. The third suit is for libel and claims damages for $10,000. As a second and third cause of action the plaintiff sets out the statement of Mr. Bugher, as published in the Enquirer and Times, and asks $10,000 in each, making the total amount claimed by her $30,000. The fourth cause of action is for libel and assault and false imprisonment $50,000.

JOHN BLIFKINS ON HIS MUSCLE.

Of all bad things by which mankind are cursed, their own bad temper surely are the worst.

Now, John Blifkins isn't a bad fellow, but his temper is certainly one that he might improve. So in order that the Star readers may render thanks on this Day of Thanksgiving, that they are not troubled with the same complaint, we will relate what befell John a few evenings since. He was in a bad humor all day, so he quit work quite early that afternoon (he works over on Central avenue), and wended his way home. As he neared his comfortable little cottage on Mount street, it occurred to him that his wife had told him in the morning that she was going down to "mother's," and wanted him to come down and they'd both stay to tea.

Just at this time he was in no mood to go anywhere but home, and as he got nearer and nearer the madder he grew. And when he had knocked on his own door the second time and received no response, he was as mad as a March hare. Not making any headway towards effecting an entrance, but doing considerable damage in the way of barking his knuckles, he left the door and entered the side gate. He tried the back door; it was locked, of course. And the windows—he was baffled there. He returned to the front with his face the length of a fence rail, but with a look of fierce determination. Setting his grub-basket down just inside the gate, he walked out into the street and gathered up a bowlder and made for the front cellar door, and by two or three vigorous blows severed the lock just as his next door neighbor came out to volunteer the information that "Mrs. Blifkins stuck the door-key under the front step."

Then he did boil, and yanking that key from its hiding-place he jammed it in the lock, opened the door and slid inside as though he was greased. Getting light on the situation by raising the blinds, he flung his hat at the grate, and his overcoat in the corner, and sat down to think. And there he sat nursing his wrath to keep it warm, for more than an hour. A knock at the front door disturbed his reverie. He straightened up, vowing to himself that if it was a tippeder or a sewing-machine man, he'd kick him into the middle of next week. He opened the door, but no one appeared. He must have been mistaken. It might have been the next house, he thought. He went back, and being color by this time, the thought struck him that a fire would be an improvement. He was getting his work in first-rate on the reluctant kindling-wood and wet coal, and was on his knees blowing away for dear life, when—"rap," "rap," came another summons, this time quite distinct.

He noticed up and pulled the door open with a will. Nobody there! He stepped outside, peered up and down the street, but not a soul was stirring save the familiar form of "Whistling Charley" slouching along in the gloom. By this time Blifkins was nervous. He didn't understand it. He sat down again, however, and had given the grate a few remorseless "jaifs" with the poker, when bang, bang, went that much afflicted door. "This thing's getting a little monotonous," said Blifkins; and he plunged for the sidewalk. He was just in time to catch a glimpse of a ragged coat-tail and a soiled pair of boot-heels as the whiskey around the corner but a few steps away.

"Ah, ha. Just let me catch that infernal little rascal. I'll break every bone in his devilish carcass, see if I don't. And I'll catch him, too, or my name ain't Blifkins."

So he laid a plan for the capture of the whiskey-drunk. He passed out (on a full hand) the back door into the side alley and stationed himself just up against the front gate, the latch of which he left undone to enable him to make fast time. He waited. It was now quite dark. It wasn't a comfortable trying place, and poor Blifkins was about ready to give it up, when again his ears were saluted by the old familiar sound. Out popped Mr. Blifkins, with flame in his eye and murder (almost) in his heart. "I've got you this time, you heathenish blackguard. I'll learn you to bang on a man's door just for fun, you bloody wretch!" Whack, whack. At this moment Mrs. John Blifkins, the innocent victim of her husband's terrible excitement, screamed out: "John, you John Blifkins, you two-headed idiot you. If I didn't know your voice I'd think it was some escaped lunatic. What do you mean, you filthy rascal, striking your own loving wife with your fist. Come right in this house, and if you don't get right down on your knees and beg my pardon I'll never darken your door again."

The next morning all the neighbors had it that "the brute, John Blifkins, beat his wife almost to a jelly because she didn't have his supper ready on time."

Personal.

Thomas R. Smiley, editor of the Madison (Ind.) Democrat, is at the Madison House, where he proposes to eat his Thanksgiving dinner.

E. D. Drumgoole, of Louisville, Ky., a prominent druggist of that place, and publisher of the Louisville Echo, is stopping at the Madison House.

J. K. Miller, a contractor on the Southern Railway, and builder of the College Hill Narrow-gauge railroad, is in the city and registered at the Madison.

In the Card Business.

Mr. T. C. Campbell rushes into print with a card giving his side of the story of the Parsons-Sommer affair. He thinks that the following letter, addressed to him by A. Sommer, Cashier of the Western German Bank, should dispose of the matter as far as he is concerned:

"DEAR SIR:—In answer to your to-day's note, I would say that the part you have taken in the Parsons affair, as far as the much talked-of trip to Jersey City is concerned, was only in accordance with my urgent request and contrary to your advice. I regret very much that this affair has given you so much unnecessary annoyance. Yours, very truly,

Mr. Campbell says "I can not see that Mr. Sommer's part in the matter was wrong. A man who he supposed to be the party that swindled him fourteen months before, was indicted at his request. Subsequent conversation with the party, comparison of hand-writing, and reading affidavits, proving that the man was in a distant city at the date of the swindle, convinced him that he was mistaken."

A card from the much-wanted Parsons is now in order.

Amusements.

THE GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.—Miss Coombs appeared as "Julia," in Sheridan Knowles' play of the "Hunchback," last night, with a splendid cast. The play ran very smoothly indeed, and all acquitted themselves with credit. The "Tom's Cabin," a new arrangement or adaptation of the old play by A. D. Bradley, will be given at the matinee this afternoon, with a powerful cast, new scenery and new properties. The "School for Scandal," with Miss Coombs as "Lady Teazle," will be given to-night. Mr. Bradley will assume the role of "Sir Peter," a character in which he is unrivaled.

WOOD'S THEATER.—"Musette" was the attraction at this house last night. Quite a good audience was in attendance, and was kept in good spirits during the entire evening by the sprightly little Lotta. A grand matinee will be given this afternoon at 2 o'clock, Lotta appearing as "Musette," supported by the two comedians, Ed. Locke and Ed. Marble.

THE NATIONAL.—There will be a matinee performance at this house this afternoon, when an unusually attractive bill will be presented.

At the Seventh Presbyterian Church, on Broadway, this evening, a pleasant entertainment for children will take place for the benefit of the Pilgrim Mission Sunday-school, consisting of magic lantern pictures, recitations, and other exercises.

STRICTLY PURE.

It is a fact that while Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and True Flavoring Extracts, Lemon, Vanilla, etc., have been made for many years without reducing their standard of perfect purity, not another Baking Powder or Flavoring Extract in the market is free from adulteration. There are no coloring, poisonous oils or acids in Dr. Price's Flavors, nor chalk, alum, or other injurious substances in his Cream Baking Powder. We know the manufacturers take pride in having their articles strictly pure.
